

Why You Chose Them — The Attachment Wound

Understanding the Blueprint Without Blaming Yourself

"See what great love the Father has lavished on us." — 1 John 3:1

KEY CONCEPTS

1 Attachment theory in 60 seconds

Your earliest relationships created a blueprint for love — what it looks like, what it costs, how you earn it. If love was unpredictable, conditional, or came with pain, your nervous system learned to seek out what felt familiar. Familiar and healthy are not the same thing.

2 Why narcissists feel magnetic

The intense attention, the feeling of being truly seen, the promise of something extraordinary — this is love bombing, and it activates the same neural pathways as your earliest attachment experiences. Your nervous system didn't pick someone bad. It picked someone who felt like home.

3 You are not the wound

Understanding your attachment wound is not self-blame. It is the most compassionate thing you can do for yourself. The wound was formed before you had any power to prevent it. And here's the truth: the Father's love — patient, consistent, unconditional — is the secure attachment your nervous system has always been seeking.

THIS WEEK'S PRACTICE

Write: 'What did love look like in my earliest experiences?' and 'What did I have to do or be to receive it?' Don't judge the answers. Just notice the blueprint.

YOUR REFLECTION

'I didn't choose harm — I sought love with the blueprint I was given. I am now learning a new blueprint.'

YOUR NOTES & JOURNAL SPACE

Why You Chose Them — The Attachment Wound

Understanding the Blueprint Without Blaming Yourself

"See what great love the Father has lavished on us." — 1 John 3:1

WANT TO GO DEEPER?

The full community has an entire module on The Wounded Heart with a Parts Mapping Journal — where you meet and care for the younger versions of yourself who formed this blueprint. It's gentle, guided, and transformative. Inside Reclaim Your Self at $27/month.

knownlovedcoaching.com | Reclaim Your Self Community — $27/month