

Beauty From Ashes — This Is Not the End of Your Story

Post-Traumatic Growth and Kingdom Purpose

"To bestow on them a crown of beauty instead of ashes." — Isaiah 61:3

KEY CONCEPTS

1 Post-traumatic growth is real

Research consistently shows that many survivors of significant trauma don't just return to their previous baseline — they grow beyond it. In compassion, wisdom, resilience, depth of faith, and sense of purpose. You are not just healing back to who you were. You are becoming someone new.

2 Your story is not a liability

The very thing that was meant to destroy you is what God will use most. Isaiah 61 promises beauty for ashes — not despite the ashes, but from them. The suffering you've carried is not wasted. It is seed. The story you've lived is the exact story that will bring hope to someone else.

3 What healing actually looks like

Healing is not the absence of hard days. It's having the tools to move through them. It's catching yourself before the spiral. It's setting a boundary without your hands shaking for an hour afterward. It's noticing beauty. It's laughing without guilt. It's being in your body and not running from it.

THIS WEEK'S PRACTICE

Write your healing declaration: 'I am [name]. I have survived [acknowledge it]. I am becoming [who you're becoming]. I choose [one thing you choose from here]. I am known. I am loved. I am free.'

YOUR REFLECTION

'Beauty is coming from my ashes. My story is not over. The best of who I am is still ahead.'

YOUR NOTES & JOURNAL SPACE

WANT TO GO DEEPER?

You've completed the free mini course. Now come deeper. The Reclaim Your Self community gives you the full 12-week curriculum — interactive tools, somatic practices, video lessons, downloadable worksheets, and a faith-based community of women healing alongside you. Just $27/month. Cancel any time.

knownlovedcoaching.com | Reclaim Your Self Community — $27/month